TRANSCRIPT

Hi, my name's Harry Bundred and I'm the Director of the Institute of Training And Occupational Learning. It was a number of years ago when I first met Paul Matthews, and I was instantly struck with the ease in which he was able to communicate some of the more complex areas of learning and development. Subsequently, he was invited to participate in ITOL's Annual Convention for Trainers, and he proved himself to be a very capable workshop leader.

Subsequently to that, over the last couple of years, we've invited Paul to occupy the keynote speaking slot. Certainly, his audiences have been very appreciative of the way in which he has been able to help them face up to the challenges of being able to turn knowledge and competence into capability. Because of that, I have no hesitation in recommending Paul to you.

In fact, I would guarantee that if you did invite Paul to participate in your events, you would get three things. First of all, you would get inspiration, secondly, you would get practical knowhow, and thirdly, you would get enthusiasm. I don't really know what else you'd need.
